World of Fine Indian Dining (FBW NO. 66)

Opened in 1978 and located in a basement with only a small sign outside. it might be unnoticeable on the outside, but it presents somehow an unforgettable casual, world of fine indian dining at prices that are more Calcutta than Central. There are only 3 items on the entire menu over $100 and all the naan bread, veggie and rice sides are under $50. Prepared by Indian chefs with decades of experience, the curries, lamb specialties and tandoori dishes are totally authentic and made only with imported spices and herbs unique to each dish.

Unique Nepalese Cuisine (FBW NO. 4681)

Nothing eye-catching on the outside, but i-curry is definitely one of my favourite spots in Central. It's not impossible to find a nepalese restaurant in Central, but it's hard to find one with nice food at a good price. Here in i-curry you can experience authentic nepalese food with less than $100. Everything from curries to snacks. The quality is ace even in things as little as Mala Lai Chai - smooth as silk - a must try. There are different sauces for different dishes like tomato for momo and herbs for onion rings. The idea is to add spiciness to the flavor while making the food taste less greasy. Hmm ...clever choice!

New Look & Posh Menu (FBW NO. 1491)

Since the shop renovation, the menu has undergone as much of a transformation as the venue. Although the staple sandwich and pizza favorites are still there, there is a huge addition in the shape of real meals and by that I mean things which don't come between two bits of bread. That's right, the sweet little sandwich shop has elevated itself to mini restaurant proportions. There are appetizers such as wild mushroom on toast, also salads, soup, pastas and mains such as grilled beef sirloin steak served on garlic mash and tomato salsa or butter fish fillet on lemon and braised vegetables. Thumbs up with the new look and the posh menu!

IVAN THE KOZAK

A Total Russian Menu (FBW NO. 1605)

This restaurant should be added to your favorite for a combination of reasons. First, there aren't many Russian restaurant in Hong Kong, when there is one, it is Ivan the Kozak to name. They serve delicious dishes with excellent service at a very good price.

What more is, this is a restaurant with a -15 degree cold room where you can see quite many European comes in a group of 4-5 person, wearing the thick fur provided, jumping into the cold room and coming out in just 20 minutes with satisfaction all over their face. Why is that? Ivan the kozak owner explained they missed home.

Both Local and Foreigner-loved (FBW NO. 1914)

Situated in an alley in the middle of Mercer Street this Singaporean restaurant is packed with closely placed chairs and tables. The decor is clean but average, with soothing green colors and little squares decorating the wall. Good choices are the laksa supreme with prawn, cockles, fish cake and tofu pot; mee siam supreme with prawn, pork and fish cake. the noodles are chewy and cooked just right. Overall, the service is efficient and the waiters are polite; portions tend to be big, so it's decent value.

Sampled what Mala is famous for - Hainanese chicken rice. The meat was sweet and moist, the rice was heavily fragranced with chicken, and the dipping sauces could well have been homemade. Good stuff. Also try Rendang beef curry with rice topped with fried garlic chips, which was spicy and hearty. After a quick look around the room, it seemed like every table ordered the same. They are also known for their stir-fried curry crab, but the order must be placed one day in advance, so perhaps next time. Low MSG but Fresh Ingredients (FBW NO. 4855)

Mr. Li, the shop owner, has been in Japan for over 10 years. His acquaintance with a Japanese Ramen Master cook, who passed on all the skills to him before retirement, allowed him to understand the essence of ramen and led him to be the next Ramen Master. Among the three different sauces, Shio (Salt) is the most popular choice among customers. Unlike common Shio, Yachiyo's Shino is less salty, yet more fresh, a sauce which was at first specifically cooked for his wife who couldn't take in too much salt. Conclusively, Yachiyo is famous for having low MSG, but rich fresh ingredients.

Snake Master of All Time (FBW NO. 1865)

Ser Wong Fun, which translates as Snake Master (Fun is the family name), began about 70 years ago selling snake soup and snake meat from the roadside. Today, its repertoire is much wider, most notably a range of double boiled soups, for example, pigs' lungs, dried figs and almonds; shark cartilage; and dried lychees, dates and ginseng. The snake soup which followed had the strongest concentration of all thanks to the addition of mushrooms, bamboo pith and tangerine peel and was definitely more memorable.

Exquisitely Thin Pizza Crust (FBW NO. 54)

The combination of its warm-tone-colored floorings, the yellow & orange walls and wooden chairs (with cushions) creates an excellent cosy and elegant environment.

It's the little things that make this place, such as piping hot bread served with minced garlic and black pepper in olive oil. And the pizza crust doesn't come from the fridge, it's rolled and tossed right in front of you: the result is exquisitely thin and perfectly browned.

Soup Prepared for over 20 Hours (FBW NO. 2757/4680)

Sun Chuk Yuen is a quite a new restaurant which offers 100% authentic Vietnamese cuisine. It has a wide variety of dishes from rice/noodles, snacks, dessert, curries and many more. The Chef, Mr. Nam, said all soups for noodles were prepared by a traditional Vietnamese method which had beef, bones and other seasoning boiled for over 20 hours. Besides the soup, its rice noodles are so silky that they can be easily digested.

Traditional Northern Chinese Favor (FBW NO. 59)

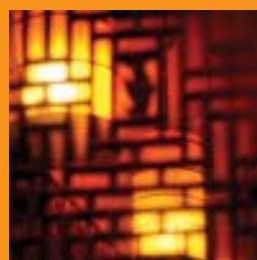

The decor is traditional but not pretentiously stylish. Everything is served with attention to appearance, from the teapots, beer in bowls and the food. If you like spicy food, try black chicken in chili and morsels of deep fried black chicken buried in fried chili peppers. They can make you end up in tears and feel like our tastebuds had burned off - hot but delicious. If you do not like spicy food, there are also dishes like crispy mutton, dumplings and many more.
